

Lyme patients must pay out-of-pocket for long-lasting treatment.

Since the CDC denies the existence of chronic Lyme, insurance companies are not required to cover costs related to the disease. Patients spend on average $53,000 per year out-of-pocket for tests, doctor visits, pharmaceuticals, and supplements.

lymestats.org